Ben Wheezy was a Sailor Man.
By P. S. KITTLEFASH.
Ben Wheezy was a sailor man, and had been round the world, and a reef had taken in, and many a flag had furled; Had threaded Cleopatra's needle, stood on Greenland's furl; Seen Russian revolutions, heard the roaring of the Surf. Ashore his gait was very slow; land-lace he never won; Yet he would often a sailor catch, and beat him in the run. Give him a decent line and lead, and in the heaviest fog, He'd take an observation just like rolling of a log. But Ben loved drink—his only fault—and it was often said, He couldn't get by the bottle without getting by the head; And then would cuff and box the crew—kick up a joll rump, And could be and no man to box, why then he'd toss the compass.
